Market Gleaners featured on UW podcast!

Market Gleaning is a program for volunteers to collect fresh, local produce from the Ballard Farmers Market vendors and bring it to the Ballard Food Bank for those who need it most. To learn more about gleaning and its role in the broader food justice movement, you can check out this podcast created by our volunteers as part of their program in the UW School of Social Work.

Ballard Sprouts - 2021 Season Updates

The Ballard Sprouts project started by planting 20 trays of seeds on February 17. Five days later we had sprouts, and two weeks later, the seedlings were big enough to transplant. We will be planting more seeds, transplanting, and tending these plants until they are ready to go into the ground. They will be planted in early April & May by gardeners who are growing food for the food banks.

Let's keep idling to a minimum to help the climate!

Want to help reduce car idling in our neighborhood? Inspired by a recent Meaningful Movie, Idle Threat, a few of us are forming a working group to see how we could reduce unnecessary idling in our neighborhood/city. We are researching current regulations and discussing an education campaign. If you are interested, please let us know. All ideas welcome!
